

SOFT LAW IN INTERNATIONAL ARBITRATION

– A TOOL TO FIGHT OR TO FOSTER GUERILLA TACTICS?

Over the last year, more and more arbitral institutions around the world have issued (or reissued) guidelines and rules for arbitration proceedings. The goal is a common one – to provide additional guidance and support for increased efficiency and transparency in arbitral proceedings.

However, the question arises whether all this documentation serves its intended purpose in the best possible way.

To which extent do guidelines assist in the conduct of arbitral proceedings? Is there a risk that guidelines may actually be counter-productive? How can they be used in the most beneficial way?
